William's legacy will help servicemen and families

THE mother of an 18-year-old soldier killed in Afghanistan one-year ago hopes his legacy will help thousands of service men and women across the UK.

Mrs Aldridge is getting ready for the official launch of the William Aldridge Foundation - which she hopes will provide a vital hub of information for serving and injured servicemen and women as well as the families of those who have died at war.

The foundation, at williamaldridgefoundation.org.uk, brings together dozens of forces charities and regimental associations in one location....
